The applicant named above has requested your financial sponsorship to pursue graduate study at Brigham Young University. The United States government requires Brigham Young University to verify that international students can provide evidence of financial support necessary to complete the degree program to which they are applying. Before BYU can issue the Form I-20, the student must provide proof of financial responsibility. All stated financial sponsorship support for the first year must be proven with the submission of financial documents that show readily available funds that can be liquidated and converted to cash in the stated amount. Additional funds for any subsequent years of study need only be available on request and can include projected income for example. This Affidavit of Support provides evidence of some or all of a student's financial support. To qualify as a sponsor, you must not be a student and must have sufficient financial resources to cover your pledge. If you agree to be a sponsor, please complete this form and attach the necessary financial documentation. You may submit this form and your documents to the applicant or directly to BYU Graduate Studies.
